

Kentucky's Adolescent Literacy Work Plan

The Kentucky Board of Education is a statewide leader in focusing the efforts of adolescent literacy development in the Kentucky Department of Education, local school districts and partners in public education. The KBE is committed to all children reaching proficiency in reading and writing and to all children performing at high levels through quality teaching and administration and a strong and supportive environment.

Teacher Preparation/Certification

A major finding of the NASBE study group responsible for the report, Reading at Risk: The State Response to the Crisis in Adolescent Literacy, is that a key way to target improvement in literacy skills is to teach them within the context of core academic subjects, rather than apart from challenging content instruction. In order to achieve this goal effectively, teacher preparation and training must be revised to include standards addressing reading and content literacy instruction so that students have access to the best prepared practitioners. This would include specific coursework in literacy for pre-service teachers in all content areas, as well as professional development opportunities in literacy for practicing teachers.

Schools and teachers will also require help in diagnosing students' reading deficiencies, implementing appropriate interventions, and assessing and monitoring progress toward goals. Additionally, the state needs to encourage more teachers to become certified reading specialists to meet the needs of our most struggling students. In Kentucky, a teacher must have a K-12 Reading/Writing Endorsement in order to teach a reading intervention class at the secondary level. Currently, there are 682 teachers with credentials in this area, but only 110 are currently teaching at the middle or high school level. There are 617 Reading courses reported, according to the Education Professional Standards Board (EPSB), but courses counted as reading intervention classes are not specified.

Additionally, schools and teachers will need resources and staff to support implementation of literacy plans and strategies. Recent work to revise principal preparation, redesign master's programs, establish teacher leadership networks, and restructure secondary are among those initiatives that relate to fulfilling the resources and staffing needs required to meet our goals.

Task Force Recommendations:

1. Increase competency of pre-service teachers in reading theory and practice across all content areas, grades 4-12.
2. Increase competency of pre-service teachers across all content areas in literacy strategies, grades 4-12.
3. Provide endorsements and certifications for literacy coaching and literacy leadership.
4. Provide incentives to increase the number of certified Reading Specialists and provide emergency certifications while teachers are earning certifications.
5. Model research-based literacy strategies within post-secondary classrooms.

Goal: 1. Increase competency in reading theory and practice of all pre-service teachers who are seeking certification for grades 4-12.

Professional Development

In addition to teacher preparation and certification, practicing teachers need on-going, job-embedded professional development in order to implement literacy instruction across the content areas. According to the Alliance for Excellent Education report, Literacy Instruction in the Content Areas, “Inasmuch as the academic content areas comprise the heart of the secondary school curriculum, content literacy instruction must be a cornerstone of any movement to build the high-quality secondary schools that young people deserve and on which the nation’s social and economic health will depend.” The report goes on to say that “reading and writing are more than just basic skills that permit students to go on and study advanced subject matter; reading and writing are also the very stuff from which the academic content areas are made.” Professional development supported by school leadership is a key way to increase teacher competency in this area.

Task Force Recommendations:

6. Provide professional development in literacy and learning strategies.
7. Provide professional development in literacy strategies to enhance content learning.

Instructional Resources

As pre-service and practicing teachers gain skill in integrating literacy into the content areas, they will need resources to develop capacity in the schools in order to support implementation. And while it is useful for teachers and students to know and use a set of general literacy strategies, it is not enough in order for students to navigate the difficult content-specific texts they encounter in the various subjects. According to Alvermann and Moore and other literacy researchers, not all literacy skills can be transferred easily from one field to another. Resources are a key way to support implementation.

Task Force Recommendations:

12. Provide literacy resources (e.g., instructional CDs/DVDs, print materials) to schools.
13. Extend time for literacy by embedding literacy strategies in all academic areas and through cross-discipline units of study.
14. Target literacy instruction for struggling readers through access to teachers who are highly trained in literacy instruction, assessments and interventions.

Data Informed Decision Making

Assessments, including diagnostic, formative and summative, are essential in informing instruction to meet students' individual needs. Adjustments to instruction based on data ensure that student learning is on track to meet learning goals. Kentucky is well posed to meet many of these needs through Individualized Learning Plans, a data system to track student performance, and intervention requirements to meet College Readiness Standards, but schools will need information and support in designing informal and formal assessments to diagnose and monitor students. Kentucky can also use data from initiatives such as Striving Readers and the Adolescent Literacy Coaching Project to inform decisions.

Task Force Recommendations:

17. Use diagnostic and formative assessments, including determining students' reading levels in content areas, to inform instruction.
18. Use data (including Explore, PLAN and ACT) to determine interventions needed for students, including those not meeting college readiness standards.
19. Use Individualized Learning Plans (grades 6-12) to differentiate instruction and meet individual learning needs and goals.

Goal 6: Use multiple sources of data to determine and monitor student literacy needs.

Support Structure

The support structure section includes instructional support as well as infrastructure. According to Reading Next, “Improving instruction, whether done by an entire school or a single teacher, can have dramatic effects on student achievement. However, improving school infrastructure to better support literacy teachers and students in addition to instructional improvement will reap the biggest rewards. Ultimately, change can occur from the top down, the bottom up, or the middle in, but truly effective and enduring change must include elements of both instruction and infrastructure.”

Task Force Recommendations:

20. Require schools to develop literacy plans.
21. Utilize literacy and learning strategies as a component of Kentucky Teacher Internship Program (KTIP) observation protocols and experienced teacher standards.
22. Encourage involvement by administrators in team planning, implementation and monitoring of literacy plans.
23. Provide state level literacy coaches to work with schools and literacy coaches to improve literacy instruction.
24. Establish a literacy office that is responsible for organizing existing resources to form a cohesive support system for schools and districts, preschool through postsecondary.
